Inough America has been spared from serving as a battleground, each one of us has in one way or another faced the stark realism of war. Pain and suffering have been inflicted upon us if only by the severance of family ties; the sight of returning men; and the memory of men never to return.

At such a time, more than at any other, we can best find solace in prayer. Trust and faith in God can alone soothe our souls and give us peace of mind. Regardless of race, color or creed there is a house of God for everyone in America. In Church this Easter, we shall all find the comfort and compassion, the spiritual guidance, so poignantly needed to carry us through these trying days—until one day our hearts are glad again—that will be the glorious day of Victory.

But Victory is not yet ours. On Easter Sunday, each one of our boys in the thick of battle shall have a prayer on his lips. Let us, then, offer up our Easter prayers for these men who are giving their lives to make our democracy safe . . . and for the resurrection of peace on earth in His name, whose own blessed resurrection this day signifies.
